Design and Construction

The Ark Royal was designed as a fleet carrier, capable of carrying a large number of aircraft and operating as part of a battle group. She was laid down in 1937 and launched in 1938. The Ark Royal was one of the first aircraft carriers to be equipped with an armoured flight deck, which made her more resistant to enemy bombs and shells.

Armament

The Ark Royal was armed with a variety of weapons, including:

- 16 x 4.5-inch guns
- 32 x 2-pounder guns
- 8 x 20 mm anti-aircraft guns
- 12 x .50 caliber machine guns

Service History

The Ark Royal entered service in 1939, just before the outbreak of World War II. She served in the Mediterranean Sea, the Atlantic Ocean, and the Indian Ocean. The Ark Royal played a key role in several major naval battles, including the Battle of the Mediterranean, the Battle of the Atlantic, and the Battle of the Coral Sea.

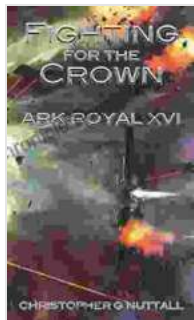

In 1941, the Ark Royal was sunk by a German U-boat. The loss of the Ark Royal was a major blow to the Royal Navy, but she remains one of the most famous and iconic ships in British naval history.
